Ryan,

I am not sure if you are aware of this but I have been on the Board of The Children's Cancer Fund of New Mexico for 8 years, and am the past President. This month is national cancer awareness month and the Pediatric Oncology Department at UNM Hospital is holding its first Cure Search Walk as part of a national event on October 15th at 9:00. I have been ask by the staff of UNM Hospital Oncology Department to reach out and see if the Governor would be interested in speaking at and maybe participate in the event. I know the Governor is busy, and timing a little short, but I thought that it might be a good thing for the Governor.

If you need to know more just let me know.

Robert Mattine's son is a combat wounded vet.

As of 2003, when his son went through it, vets who graduated from HS in NM can qualify for the lottery scholarship if they apply to college within 6 months of discharge from active duty. For the wounded vets, their care at the VA can take longer than that. (His son was treated for 9 months before discharge from the hospital and didn't qualify for the lottery scholarship as a result.)

If the law hasn't been changed in the intervening years, it would be a nice little proposal to allow NM wounded warriors to qualify for the lottery scholarship whenever. . . or up to 2 years after discharge or something. . .

The numbers are small, but it's a good thing to do. . .

The NMBA went before the LFC yesterday which we assumed was a budget review meeting. We were preparing to just share our Flat budget figures with Patricia Lundstom and Kiki, and Lujan since the dog and pony show was already presented by our staff to the same committee in Tor C? We assumed? Well, Ryan please share with the Governor that Patty ripped us apart, Kiki demanded we have maps where the Border is located? Dal The budget figures were not enough? Then Sandoval and Lujan wanted to know more about water rights and who owns them in Santa Teresa and is the Verde group reaping all the benefits? Obviously, he forgets that Patrick Lyons and the State got a nice check from the Union Pacific Corp. for the purchase of the land! Not the Verde group? I have never been put down in a public forum like this group can deliver! Jon Barela and Col Jim Creek and our Authority was asked to return in November and do it right with tons of info, color graphs, and of course a map for Kiki showing the border location? Is this normal behavior from the democrats..remember the Municipal position I held was non-partison.

Rail Runner: Go big or go lean?
 KRQE News

ALBUQUERQUE (KRQE) - New Mexico's commuter train is in dire need of grand ideas if it is to financially survive, according to one of the train's supporters.

But Gov. Susana Martinez is wary of expensive, unfunded plans and believes the state needs to take a long, hard look at the 5-year-old Rail Runner Express to find a way lessen the financial bloodletting.

"It's craziness," said Keith Gardner, Martinez's chief of staff. "This is not the way the state should be run."

Martinez views the train as a financial boondoggle perpetrated by former Gov. Bill Richardson, he said.

"We need to go back and take a look at how this thing is being operated and how we can stop the bleeding," Gardner said.

The train's $840 million debt costs taxpayers $112,328 a day, or about $40 million a year. And that's not counting the $68,493 a day, or about $25 million a year, the state spends to operate the train.

All that is for about 2,500 daily riders who contribute $8,878 a day, or about $5 million a year, to ride the rails between Albuquerque and Santa Fe.

While Larry Abraham, who is vice-chairman of the train's operating board, agreed that the numbers don't add up to anything resembling a rosy financial picture, he thinks the Rail Runner needs to think big and become more than just a commuter train if it is to survive.

"Maybe you put slot machines on some of the trains, I'm not sure," said Abraham, who is also mayor of Los Ranchos de Albuquerque. "But we gotta think out of the box because we have a lot invested in this train."

He wants to gather all of those who have an interest in the train around one table and figure out a solution. Abraham's other ideas include building high-density communities with retail components around each rail station, a link to the Spaceport now under construction north of Las Cruces and possibly turning the Rail Runner into a tourist-centric train operated by the state's Economic Development Department.

"I think I can do a great service to the state of New Mexico if I can figure out with a group of people how to make this train viable and how to turn it in to a positive asset for the state," Abraham said. "The train is ours. The debt is ours. How are we going to make this successful and sustainable? I think we can."

But Gardner warned that any ideas to save the Rail Runner must come with a funding plan.

"There are those who would propose, 'Hey send us a few more checks, a few more bailouts and we're going to spend our way out of this problem, and by spending money we're going to fix it,'" Gardner said. "Don't come in and say, 'We have these great ideas but we want you to pay for them.' That's not the case."

Madam Governor:

My name is Neddie Archuleta, Sr. I am writing this letter to introduce myself. I was born at home in El Rito, New Mexico in Rio Arriba County on April 14, 1952. I am sixty years old and part of the Archuleta family. We have lived in Rio Arriba County since the 1700s and have been a strong Republican family since then.

My brother, Phil T. Archuleta, urged me to apply for this position as PRC Commissioner. Phil assigned me tasks to help with your campaign in the 3rd Congressional District to help get you elected. We both worked extremely hard to get you elected; with great force and little resistance we were successful in our efforts. I am a loyal Republican and a firm follower of Regan economics and beliefs. I practice them in everyday life, in marriage and family. My American dream is that this nation will one day sustain itself as in times past, when great leaders were in office such as the late, great Ronald Regan.

I know there are a lot of candidates for this job but if you want an honest and dependable man, I am the man you are looking for. My accomplishments and work history speak for themselves, as well as my political involvement. We have had a wide array of people in this position and, aside from Ben Ray Lujan, the elected people have mostly proven to be incompetent in this position; all book-smart with no real intentions of doing a good job, just going through the motions. This has been an embarrassment to our great state and our current elected commissioner, whom had no intentions of doing his elected duties, was able to defraud our great state. I may not have the education of some candidates for this job, and I came from nothing, but I have excelled in this world. I started from nothing and became a successful businessman as well as an executive for a huge petroleum giant.

I am honest, dependable, and law abiding with not even a speeding ticket in the last 20 years. I am drug and alcohol free and have been married for 40 years. I take care of my handicapped wife every morning before work; I work long hours and enjoy my life. I have been a district manager of an oil company and have a firm understanding of the business. I have owned a trucking company and understand the dynamics of the trucking industry. I have a firm grasp and knowledge of underground utilities and I am a member of the Operators and Engineers Union Local 953.

Thank you, for your time and consideration,

Trevor Rees-Jones: The Wildcatter

He left a law career to search for oil and gas on a speculative basis, and once drilled 17 dry holes in a row. He never gave up, though, and today he's a multibillionaire "throwback" to the great Texas energy legends.

By by Glenn Hunter
D CEO OCT 2011

The under-the-radar dinner at Dallas' Petroleum Club with top Chevron officials and the governor from the Northeast capped a busy day for energy entrepreneur Trevor D. Rees-Jones.

A few hours earlier, Texas Gov. Rick Perry and Rees-Jones—the founder, president, and CEO of Dallas-based Chief Oil & Gas—had hosted a reception of top business executives for the Republican Governor's Association at Rees-Jones' Park Cities mansion.

The dinner that followed in downtown Dallas was a heavyweight affair as well.

Chevron was buying 228,000 acres in the Marcellus Shale natural-gas play from Chief and its Marcellus partner, Tug Hill Inc., and there were issues about the transaction to discuss.

Among those breaking bread with Rees-Jones at the exclusive private club: Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Corbett, whose state is home to a good portion of the Marcellus gas field; Tug Hill founder Michael Radler, who doubles as Chief's COO; and Gary P. Luquetin, president of Chevron North America Exploration and Production Co.

Looking back on this particular day, and recent others like it, the Chief CEO says: "I'm riding at a pretty high altitude now." Which may be an understatement.

Rees-Jones, 60, was ranked on Forbes' latest list of the 400 richest Americans with an estimated net worth of $3.3 billion, up from $3 billion the year before. The Highland Park High School graduate earned the money drilling mainly for natural gas in shale deposits in North Texas, and elsewhere, with his 17-year-old company, which has grown to employ about 120. He's also become one of the region's foremost philanthropists, giving away tens of millions of dollars to nonprofit groups.

Often described by associates as a "bigger than life" personality who will seal a deal on the strength of a handshake, Rees-Jones has emerged along the way as a modern-day Texas wildcatter, a 21st century energy legend in the mold of H.L. Hunt, "Dad" Joiner, and Monty Moncrief.

"He's the best partner we've ever had, and I've had hundreds of partners," says businessman Ross Perot Jr., whose Barnett Shale gas field in Fort Worth sold for $1.3 billion after Chief developed it. "Shale plays are sweeping the nation now, but it all started in Fort Worth with guys like Trevor. It was little companies, little guys, risking their capital, and they changed the world. Trevor is a classic great businessman who bet it all on a dream, and it worked."

The Chief CEO, for his part, says he's mostly been "awfully fortunate."

Risk and Reward

Rees-Jones, who grew up in University Park, didn't set out to be an energy entrepreneur.

He was the oldest of three children—he has one brother and one sister—born to a lawyer-father and a housewife-mother. As a teenager Rees-Jones (the name is of Welsh origin) was an Eagle Scout, which "took a lot of work," recalls Jim Francis, a Dallas businessman and Republican operative whose younger brother was good friends with Rees-Jones growing up.

Francis' father and Rees-Jones' father were law partners and hunting buddies, Francis remembers, and both families lived on Centenary Avenue. "All the Rees-Jones kids were just good kids," Francis says.

After graduating from Highland Park High, Rees-Jones went on to earn a B.A. degree from Dartmouth College and a law degree from Southern Methodist University. Then he worked for more than five years as an oil-and-gas bankruptcy lawyer at Dallas' Thompson & Knight firm. Eventually, though, "I just realized that being a lawyer was not my calling," Rees-Jones says. "I felt more interested in putting deals together from a business standpoint: getting things done, getting wells drilled, finding a gas field, establishing production. I was just intrigued by that more than researching the law and writing briefs."

When he left Thompson & Knight, Rees-Jones says, he had $4,000 in the bank that he parlayed into a $48,000 line of credit from Republic National Bank. Over the next decade he worked in the oil and gas fields drilling or investing in more than 400 "high-risk" exploratory wells, mostly in Southwest and Central Texas. At one point, he drilled 17 dry holes in a row.

"Every two or three years, I'd find a new little field to get on down the road. Then you'd get down the road and be broke again," Rees-Jones says. "I loved it."

He sometimes got discouraged during this period, but he never quit. "I was single back then, and I could take a deal with risk," he recalls. "But when I got married, I had to find a way to lower my risk profile."

The result of that decision was Chief Oil & Gas, which Rees-Jones started in 1994 with four shareholders for "just a couple hundred thousand dollars." Early on, he says, the company focused on "picking the last meat off the bones" of the remaining gas reserves from George Mitchell's wildcatting partnership in the Boonsville gas field in Wise County. "It was pretty low-risk," Rees-Jones says of the Boonsville play. "But it was also pretty depleted."

It wasn't until 1999 that Chief turned its attention to the Barnett Shale, a so-called "unconventional" gas field stretching over parts of North and Central Texas including Tarrant, Denton, and Parker counties. Mitchell's company, as it happened, was pioneering a new drilling technique there called hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," to extract natural gas trapped inside the area's shale rock formations.

Chief jumped headlong into this revolutionary technology—"we were a gnat flying around the big elephant," Rees-Jones says—including the use of horizontal as opposed to vertical drilling, at the same time that natural-gas prices were taking off. By the mid-2000s, Chief had become the second-largest producer in the Barnett and the biggest in Tarrant County.

It was around this time that the Dallas wildcatter struck the first of the big, extraordinarily lucrative natural-gas deals that would make him rich.

In 2006, Rees-Jones sold Chief's leasehold and production assets in the Barnett to Devon Energy, and its pipeline and midstream assets to Crosstex Energy, for $2.63 billion in cash. He then reinvested some of those proceeds in an existing minerals-drilling partnership with Ross Perot Jr.'s Hillwood Energy at Fort Worth's AllianceTexas development. That partnership sold out to Quicksilver Resources in 2008, for $1.3 billion.

Meantime, Chief had expanded its natural-gas exploration, development, and production activities beyond Texas to the massive Marcellus natural-gas shale play in Appalachia. There, Chief and Michael Radler's Tug Hill investment firm leased the mineral rights on some 650,000 acres in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Maryland.

Two years ago, the companies agreed to sell 30 percent of their Marcellus interests for $406 million to Canada's Enerplus Resources Fund. In 2010, Chief and Tug Hill sold another chunk of the Marcellus assets to Exco Resources for $459.4 million. Then, earlier this year, they completed the 228,000-acre sale to Chevron Corp. That left Chief and Tug Hill with about 125,000 acres of Marcellus leasehold, in what Rees-Jones calls a "highly productive area." While the value of the Chevron transaction was not disclosed, Forbes writer Christopher Helman recently wrote, "My estimate is that the deal means another $1 billion pay day for Rees-Jones."

Despite his record of such successful, multimillion-dollar deals, the Chief CEO scoffs at the idea that he was able to "time" the sales to Devon and Crosstex, for example. "I wish I could take credit for that, but it's impossible to do," Rees-Jones says. "Just as you can't pick the right time to sell a stock, we didn't realize that the market was nearing a peak, or was anywhere near a peak, at the time we sold in 2006."

"We were not trying to time the market, although in hindsight the natural-gas price peak was '06 to '08. At the time of the Devon sale, prices were around $9 [per million cubic feet of gas]. We actually accomplished another sale—the Alliance leasehold interest with the Perot family—right before the market crashed, when the price was up to around $13/Mcf. "From 1984 to '94, I would have been happy to count on gas at $2/Mcf," Rees-Jones goes on. "In 2002, '03, '04, things had gotten absolutely crazy [with higher prices], and that's one reason we tried to sell. We were made very nervous by this explosion in prices. Anytime you see the price of anything multiplying by five or six or seven times, you're nervous about a bubble. Those days we're at an average of $4/Mcf, but that's still twice what it was in the 1994 time period."

Handshake Deals

Besides an element of luck or happy timing, Rees-Jones' business success by most accounts has stemmed from a combination of hard work, personal integrity, steely determination, and good-ol'-boy charisma.

"He's a big personality. He kind of has that Texas drawl, so when he walks into a meeting, people are drawn to him," says Mike Allen, the founder and president of Dallas-based Providence Energy Corp., who's been a partner with Rees-Jones in a number of energy deals.

"He's also very approachable. When he comes into our office, he literally talks to everyone. That makes you like working for him. At the same time, he's intensely competitive. He just doesn't like to lose. So, the pressure's on you not to lose."

Radler of Tug Hill agrees that while Rees-Jones may be "bigger than life" and an "honest, real person," he's also a canny businessman. "He's probably one of the toughest negotiators I've ever dealt with," Radler says. "He's got his own ideas about the way things should go. He'll say, 'This is the way I think it should be structured.' He's fair, though, and, once an [agreement] is made, it's set in stone."

"He's been in the right place at the right time," another associate says. "But he didn't stop—he did it again. So let's put it this way: When Trevor calls, I jump."

Just about everyone you talk with about the Chief CEO says his word is his bond, and that his handshake can be all it takes to finalize a deal. "If you shake his hand, he's old-school—he's golden on that," says Allen. Adds Radler: "We've been partners for six or seven years, investing over $1 billion. But we don't have any legal partnership documents—just a handshake."

Clinching multimillion-dollar deals with a handshake was a hallmark of the traditional Texas wildcatter, historians say. But these days, businessmen like Perot contend, it's about as rare as a 70-degree July afternoon in Dallas. "You've always got guys out there who will start wriggling around on you," Perot says. "And a lot of our partners are institutions, so even if they say something's going to get done, you've got committees and boards to go through before it happens. When Trevor says it's done, it's done."

Disgruntled Investors

Not everyone agrees that the Chief CEO is such a straight-shooter, however. In fact, a couple of his former investors have filed lawsuits alleging that Rees-Jones made them "low-ball" offers to buy out their minority stakes in the company.

One of those investors, D. Bobbitt Noel Jr., sold his 5.76 percent stake in Chief Holdings LLC back to Chief for $6.5 million in 2004. The other, Robert B. Allen, accepted about $8.2 million for his 7.2 percent interest in the company the same year. Both men, who originally invested less than $1,000 apiece in Chief, charge that Rees-Jones underpaid them, withholding key information leading to the company's $2.6 billion sale to Devon two years later.

A Houston jury found in Noel's favor in March, and a Texas state district judge entered a $196 million judgment, including $116 million in damages, against Rees-Jones and Devon two months later. In July, Houston's 1st Court of Appeals overturned a lower court's ruling that had barred Allen's claims, essentially allowing the case to move forward.

Rees-Jones' lawyer, Craig Haynes of Thompson & Knight, has disagreed with the latest outcomes in both cases, saying a rehearing would be requested in the Allen case, and that Rees-Jones and Chief would appeal the Noel verdict.

Says Rees-Jones: "It's all very disappointing."

Big Gifts

In a press release announcing the Noel appeal, Haynes was quoted extolling a number of Rees-Jones' virtues, including his "significant contributions to the community, along with his wife Jan, through the Rees-Jones Foundation."

On that point, there's no disagreement.

In addition to the couple's private multimillion-dollar donations, the $325 million Rees-Jones Foundation has given tens of millions of dollars to North Texas causes, with a special focus on children and families with limited resources. Among its gifts: $25 million to the Circle Ten Council of the Boy Scouts of America, $25 million to Parkland Hospital, $25 million to Dallas' Perot Museum of Nature & Science, $5 million to the Dallas Children's Advocacy Center, and $5 million to the SPCA of Texas.

"Makin' money's a fun," Rees-Jones says, "but givin' money away's as much or more fun." In the future, he adds, it's going to be "important to shift more of our resources into our foundation."

Separately from the foundation activities, Rees-Jones has also pumped millions of dollars into Republican political causes, supporting Gov. Perry's re-election effort, the group called Texans for Lawsuit Reform, and American Crossroads, an independent outfit associated with GOP strategist Karl Rove. "You're looking at a guy who is financially powerful and he's a smart guy, and you're lucky to have those kinds of people involved," energy billionaire T. Boone Pickens told The Dallas Morning News. "So I think you are going to see more of Trevor in the future. It isn't a one-off deal."

While Rees-Jones is already plotting his next big business move [see "Fracking for Oil" on this page], he also seems to be looking forward these days to enjoying the fruits of his labor. An avid hunter and fisherman, he often repays to the family's Cook Canyon Ranch near Ranger, in Central Texas. To celebrate his 60th birthday one evening in August, the Eastland County ranch was the site of a party for 900 guests. Twenty-five or 30 private jets were parked on the property's runway tarmac, Jim Francis recalls, and entertainment was provided by the Blues Brothers and the Eagles rock group. The partygoers included Dallas business titans like Pickens, Perot Jr., and TRT Holdings founder Robert Rowling, as well as actress Heather Locklear. Rees-Jones has long had a "crush" on Locklear, Francis explains, so his wife Jan good-naturedly flew the actress in for the event.

"Nothin' makes me feel better than walkin' up at my ranch," Rees-Jones says. "I'm tryin' to turn more of our ranch land into productive uses. I like finding arrowheads. I do a lot of mountain biking. I like pretending that I'm there 200 years ago."

Such sentiments seem in keeping with Rees-Jones' reputation as a "throwback" of sorts—as an old-fashioned man from the days when boldness, optimism, guile, and independence really did define the Texas spirit. Pointing to Rees-Jones' wildcatting acumen, State Rep. Dan Branch has called him "a modern legend."

"I've known Dan for a long time, and he's an awfully kind man," Rees-Jones says, when asked about Branch's comment. "I can't say what I am or not. But I can tell you that developing these shale plays that brought about a revolution in the oil and gas business, I've been awfully fortunate to have been involved. I have felt at times, throughout the last decade, like an early-day wildcatter, with a whole lot of new oil and gas left to find."

Like an early-day wildcatter, indeed—one who may be flying about as high now as any of the historic legends ever did.

Good Morning Bill, I am not sure if I mentioned to you, I had a special invitation to a very small private dinner with 10 couples at a business leader here in ABQ's home, with the Governor last night. WOW, she was fantastic. So down to earth and practical in her approach.

She talked for about 20 mins with a little Q&A. One of the questions allowed her to touch on everything going on in your area; with the border, the rail depot, Santa Teresa and industry in general and how great this will be for the state's economy. I had a few minutes with the Governor after and shared our meeting and how fascinating I found everything going on in this part of the state. Mentioned to her you have been helpful in sharing some information on my behalf to Mr. Gardner and fact our state does not have a negotiated car rental program like so many states around the country.

I told her I would be shocked if we do not open a car rental branch in this area within 12 months.

Just wanted to share this feedback with you. Hope you are well.

Regards,
John

Bill, first of all, thank you again for making some time for Marcus and me yesterday, I had a great time meeting you. I enjoyed some of our discussions about NY as much as the rest of the meeting.

What is happening down on the border is simply fascinating to me, and to be part of what you and Jim are doing really seems incredible.

I am going to be back down south on Wed/Thu the 5th and 6th. If there is any opportunity to meet with some of the key leaders at Foxconn and visit their facilities on the afternoon of the 5th or anytime of the 6th would be great. I also want to spend a little more time in the Santa Teresa area, we will open a branch for this community.

Thanks again for the info on the Early to High School College Program, Marcus and I will discuss further with Wanda. As I mentioned, our company will hire 9,000 college grads this year. We will also employ thousands of interns to become the future leaders of our organization (something we continue to expand in our business here in New Mexico). This is definitely something we see value in partnering in Las Cruces.

Lastly, I mentioned some information you thought the governor might be interested in reading. Attached you will find some great information from other states (Ma, Mn, Ga, Mo) about their incredible cost savings they have seen in reducing their fleets, reducing their "mileage reimbursement" and putting in place an alternate transportation solution.

Bill, again thank you for your time and I look forward to working together on a number of initiatives.

Regards,
 John

Susana,

We are trying to recruit Hispanics in Roosevelt County to the Republican party. You told a story about your being a Democrat until you had dinner with a Republican friend. You all talked about what you believe and realized that it is what Republicans believe and left dinner being a Republican.

If you made a video of this story, every county Republican office could use this as a recruiting tool. What do you think?

Luna County Commissioners Make Selection for New County Manager

By Matt Robinson

The Albuquerque Journal

<http://www.abqjournal.com/main/2011/10/07/abqnewsseeker/luna-county-commissioners-make-selection-for-new-county-manager.html>

DEMING — Luna County's Board of Commissioners unanimously voted to enter into negotiations with Kelly Kuenstler to fill the open county manager position.

During the Thursday meeting, commissioners voted and ordered human resources and the county's legal counsel to enter into contract negotiations with the director of the Las Cruces-based Administrative Office of the District Attorneys.

Kuenstler, born in 1967, is "tentatively" scheduled to start Oct. 31, if contract negotiations are successful, Chairman Javier Diaz said following the meeting.

"Her willingness to communicate with the members of the commission," was a top reason for selecting her, Diaz said. "She seemed very amicable. It seems she is going to fit well in the community."

She worked for the Third District DA's Office from 1997 through 2009 when she took the job heading the DA's Association Office. She has a master's of public administration degree.

Following the meeting, Luna County Undersheriff Allen Carter expressed joy after hearing the news, saying she will bring vital experience working with district attorneys and grants to the table. He said his department looks forward to working with her.

Chairman Diaz was particularly impressed with the portions of her interviews concerning the Luna County Detention Center, which has been embroiled in incident after incident in recent years.

"She was the only one that had knowledge of detentions," he added.

He also pointed to her contacts at the state level as a contributing factor to her selection.

She is replacing former manager John Sutherland, Jr., who was fired by the commission in July. A formal explanation on Sutherland's firing has never been released, but commissioners have said it involved communication issues and not being a good fit.

Her compensation will be determined during contract negotiations. Sutherland made about $90,000 a year.

Subject: Funding issues at LANL

My husband finally found work with Los Alamos Technical Associates last week and has attended two weeks of training. On Thursday, Oct 6, he was informed that he should not come to work on Friday or Monday because the funding for his projects had been revoked. This was apparently released by the Governors office, however, no official notice has been given to the subcontracting companies so everything is at a standstill. He is essentially on leave without pay until further notice.

This will have a devastating effect on our family and I would imagine on many Northern New Mexican families. This change in funding puts subcontractors of at least 4 local companies in a similar situation.

I would strongly urge you to to rethink your position on this horrible decision and allow these decent, honest and hardworking people to return to work and support their families.

Thank you,
Kimberley Hoch

 Matthew and Julia,

How might I reach Ryan as Bill Mattiace, former Mayor of Las Cruces hand delivered a letter from me to Susana to update her on the NM State Police and their collaborating with me to dig deeper into political corruption. The PRC is worse than ever and the attitude is that Susana is a one term wonder and once her term is up then it is back to business as usual, more corruption. Pat Lyons spreads more and more rumors about me when he has no facts. Ben Hall wants to dish out political favors to his buddies and the 90 or so applicants to fill Block's position, maybe 5 are qualified the rest are political hacks or see the $90,000.00 per year job as "easy money".

Would you assist me in getting me Ryan's email address and phone number.

Subject: Brasher

The following will be submitted to you shortly on Law Firm letterhead ... fyi.

Letter to:

Hon. Susana Martinez
Ryan Cangioli

Re: Paul Brasher, Candidate for State Engineer

I unequivocally recommend your appointment of Paul Brasher to the position of State Engineer.

No doubt, Mr. Brasher will provide thoughtful, thorough, unbiased and experienced guidance to an office that needs exactly those qualities.

I came to know Mr. Brasher while preparing him as a fact witness for a litigation regarding a mutual client. Prior to that, I knew of him by reputation in his capacity as a practicing civil engineer and as a former public servant working for the City of Albuquerque.

During the litigation I learned that Mr. Brasher, fresh out of college, attained employment positions at the City of Albuquerque that are usually held by seasoned professionals. From the late-1970's (while still in college) until 1986 Mr. Brasher served the public, first as a water engineer, then as the Water Resources Manager for the City of Albuquerque. Besides this particular achievement, two other qualities stood out. Mr. Brasher was always thoughtful and unbiased in his assessment of a situation. And, he had a remarkable grasp of facts that were 20 years old. As a litigator, I truly appreciated his memory, but I was more impressed with his guidance and enthusiastic thoughts on strategy going forward ... in a very complicated case which concerned a little known water right called "return flow credits."

Mr. Brasher is also the drafter and owner of a museum-quality, hand-drafted projection of City owned (circa 1978) and distributed water resources. No doubt, it is the most remarkable trial exhibit I have ever introduced.

For the record ... Mr. Brasher presented as a very credible, knowledgeable and comfortable witness.

Again, I can't overemphasize my belief that Paul will timely and thoroughly provide his assessment of both pending and developing water resource issues. He will also provide an unbiased perspective. While he has kept current with the issues, he has no loyalties, contracts, agendas or clients motivating him to support (or not) any particular policy or strategy. This could be his greatest strength from a new administration's perspective.

I hope this helps you in your consideration of Mr. Brasher for this position. Please feel free to call me if you have questions,

Best,

Re: Paul Brasher, Candidate for State Engineer

Dear Governor and Mr. Cangiolosi:

I unequivocally recommend your appointment of Paul Brasher to the position of State Engineer.

No doubt, Mr. Brasher will provide thoughtful, thorough, unbiased and experienced guidance to an office that needs exactly those qualities.

I came to know Mr. Brasher while preparing him as a fact witness for a litigation regarding a mutual client. Prior to that, I knew of him by reputation in his capacity as a practicing civil engineer and as a former public servant working for the City of Albuquerque.

During the litigation I learned that Mr. Brasher, fresh out of college, attained employment positions at the City of Albuquerque that are usually held by seasoned professionals. From the late-1970's (while still in college) until 1986 Mr. Brasher served the public, first as a water engineer, then as the Water Resources Manager for the City of Albuquerque. Besides this particular achievement, two other qualities stood out. Mr. Brasher was always thoughtful and unbiased in his assessment of a situation. And, he had a remarkable grasp of facts that were 20 years old. As a litigator, I truly appreciated his memory, but I was more impressed with his guidance and enthusiastic thoughts on strategy going forward ... in a very complicated case which concerned a little known water right called "return flow credits."

Hi Gloria,

I was wondering if it is possible to set up a short meeting with Susana for me and Randy Roybal who is the Director of the Judicial Standards Commission (Susana appointed me as a member of the Commission). His budget hearing is next Wed., October 19th @ 1:00, but he can arrive as early as 8 or 9 to meet with The Governor. We feel that the JSC is integral in the fight against corruption in NM. If this date is not good for The Governor, perhaps you can check her schedule for Monday or Tuesday (October 17 or 18th) sometime in the morning. Please let me know. Thanks Gloria, Joyce

I wanted to give everyone a heads up that we received a proclamation request for the governor to proclaim October 15th as "Motorcyclist Advocate Representative Rick Miera Day". This request came from the New Mexico Motorcycle Right Organization. I will put the proclamation through our regular approval process. I will go on record as the first "No" on this proclamation.

Also, according to the email, Lieutenant Governor John Sanchez will be presenting Representative Miera with the groups 1st Annual Motorcyclist Advocate of the year award this coming Saturday.

Interesting. Presumably Judge Serna will be over for cross-x? The alternative is to let the (existing) rules determine when and where?

In Case You Missed It*New Electronics Company Headed To NM Border

Green Chile Chatter

By Kate Nash

<http://greenchilechatter.blogspot.com/2011/10/new-electronics-company-headed-to-nm.html>

Take that, Texas! Gov. Susana Martinez announced this morning that an electronic manufacturing company will move its El Paso office to Santa Teresa. TE Connectivity will move to New Mexico after discussions over the summer.

"As we work to encourage economic growth in and attract new businesses to our state, I'm pleased that TE Connectivity has decided to expand in Santa Teresa," Martinez said in a statement.

"Continuing to foster a friendlier environment that encourages growth and investment will send a signal that New Mexico is open for business. This announcement is an important development and I am committed to further encouraging growth and expansion as we work to turn New Mexico's economy around," she said.

The company employs nearly 100,000 workers and manufactures more than 500,000 products, according to the Governor's Office. The press release didn't say how many jobs would move to New Mexico.

Guess the move puts an end to the questions of which state Martinez, who grew up in El Paso, likes better.

Ok to move to Inn at L? If you send me Teresa's info, I will email her on scheduling stuff.

Good luck this week, parenting takes some unusual twists. As hard as it is for your daughter and family, the alternative is to allow the bastards to win.

Jay,

We have confirmed the Governor at their event. She will attend their Dinner Party which is at 7:00 pm. Do we want her to attend the reception?

I am passing the information to Kim so she can plug it into the Governor's calendar.

Let me know what else you need me to do.

Thanks.

Hi Gloria:

Thanks for calling with the update this morning. Now we can finalize our program! There is a reception starting at 6:15 where Susana could attend and mingle if she chooses. Dinner and meeting starts at 7:00 if she can only make it to that but we're hoping she can spend a little time with us, as you indicated. Will she definitely be spending the night? If so, we will make a reservation for her. I'm attaching the Convention Call which has lots of information.

Dear NMFRW Member:

The Convention Committee has been working hard to bring us a fun and exciting convention where we can also enjoy what the city of Farmington has to offer. We have invited Governor Susana Martinez to be our keynote speaker at lunch on Saturday when she will talk about her accomplishments, plans and hopes as her first year as Governor comes to a close. Congressman Steve Pearce will be speaking Saturday morning and will surely tell us about the antics in Washington. The GOP State Chair Monty Newman has been invited to speak as has RNC Co-chair Sharon Day. The candidates for US Senate and Congressional Districts have all been invited to sponsor the meeting breaks and visit with us so we will have a chance to meet them. We have invited the incoming National FRW President to install the officers and speak at our Black and Silver Dinner Party on Saturday evening.

This promises to be an exciting convention. I hope you all will plan to attend. Every NMFRW member is welcome at the convention. Even if your club's voting delegation is filled, we invite you to attend the convention and enjoy the festivities.

Next year will be an exciting one. The Federation is respected and recognized nationwide as the heart of the Party and we will play a huge role in getting our Republicans elected. We will have many opportunities to get involved in campaigns at all levels. State Senate and House seats are all up for election next year. We only need three state legislative seats to become the majority party! Do you even remember when we were the majority? We also will be electing a U.S. Senator and three Congressional seats. Most importantly, we must take back the White House. Now is the time to get this Party started for 2012!

Subject: Re: 2010 Maravilla Gala - Winners for Lunch with the Governor

Jay, I received a phone call from Mr. Fresquez who claims he has been calling in regards to this request for over a year. (states he is very frustrated and that he paid $2,000 for the opportunity to have lunch with the Governor, I guess he paid this to the National Hispanic Cultural Center). I called and spoke with Chris, his assistant, and told her I had no request from his. What he is referring to is his request to the National Hispanic Cultural Center.

Are we going to fulfill these two requests for lunch with the Governor by these two different couples (Fresquez and Montoya)?

Please let me know.

Jay,

Do you know anything about this?

How are we going to handle this?

Governor Martinez attended our 2010 MARAVILLA gala here at the National Hispanic Cultural Center, October 9th of last year and signed the attached certificate for lunch with two different couples.

The following are the folks that are calling to schedule these lunches. They can either be in Santa Fe or Albuquerque. Both couples would like to travel to Santa Fe if possible.

They are:

Joe Montoya of Virginia (right outside of DC) and operates several McDonalds and other business in the area. He can be reached at 703.980.3598.

Mr. and Mrs. Lenny Fresquez of Albuquerque. He operates several airport concessions here in NM, Texas and Arizona. They can be reach at 505.804.7484 and ask for Chris.

DIGITAL LEARNING NOW!

October 20, 2011

The Honorable Susana Martinez:

A year ago, we released the 10 Elements of High Quality Digital Learning, a state-level framework for transforming education in the digital age, and launched Digital Learning Now! to support Governors, state education chiefs, state lawmakers, and state policymakers advance a reform agenda to integrate digital learning into K12 public education.

During the last year, Digital Learning Now! developed the Roadmap for Reform: Digital Learning, a comprehensive policy guide that provides specific steps for states to systematically and systemically transform education. Our goal is to provide you with the strategies and support – such as model policies, research and expert advice from a national network of advocates – that will allow you to advance and accelerate reforms.

To assist states in advancing reform, the Foundation for Excellence in Education developed a comprehensive assessment of each state's alignment to the 10 Elements of High Quality Digital Learning. Because of the complexity of the laws and policies in each state, the State Report Cards were released as drafts last week. We welcome your feedback through the end of the year to ensure the information is correct.

Intel Drops Planned Water Deal

By John Fleck

Journal Staff Writer

State officials and computer chip maker Intel are abandoning a proposed agreement in which the state would have taken over water rights obligations at Intel's Rio Rancho plant.

Given the resistance bordering on "outright hostility" to the deal among many in the New Mexico water community, "it didn't seem prudent to continue to pursue it," said Estevan López, director of the New Mexico Interstate Stream Commission.

Frank Robinson, facilities manager at the Intel plant, said the company thought the agreement would be a benefit to water management on the middle Rio Grande. When it became clear that many water users, especially the Middle Rio Grande Conservancy District, disagreed, the company decided not to move forward, Robinson said.

"We felt it was important to listen to those concerns," Robinson said in a telephone interview Monday afternoon.

Critics argued the proposal sidestepped the state's water allocation rules, handing water over to Intel that irrigators and other water rights holders should have been legally entitled to.

The practical impact of the proposal would be when Intel quits operating in the future, does not have a return flow to the river, but still owes a water debt.

López announced the Intel deal's demise during a Monday afternoon meeting of the New Mexico Interstate Stream Commission.

Commissioners also voted Monday to drop work on a related proposal to establish formal guidelines for accounting for surplus Rio Grande water.

The Intel agreement and the related surplus accounting guidelines became a lightning rod over the summer for a debate over broader issues in New Mexico water rights management.

Under its current state water permit, Intel is required to buy agricultural water rights to make up for the effect of the plant's water pumping on the Rio Grande. Most of the effect of the pumping would come in the future, as water slowly leaks out of the Rio Grande's bed into the void left by the plant's pumping.

Under the agreement, the Interstate Stream Commission would have taken over that long-term obligation, using surplus Rio Grande water credits to offset the long term effects of Intel's pumping. In return, Intel would have handed over the water rights it already owns, plus $10 million.

Backers said the state would have been able to use those water rights and the money to help ensure environmental flows for the endangered Rio Grande silvery minnow.

But a number of members of the water community, most notably the conservancy district, which delivers water to irrigators throughout the middle Rio Grande Valley, questioned the legality of the deal. They argued state officials were overstepping their legal authority in pledging surplus Rio Grande water credits to offset the future effect of Intel's pumping.

"I think the commission made the right decision," said Janet Jarratt, chairwoman of the conservancy district board, in an interview after the meeting.

With the deal now abandoned, Robinson said Intel would return to the water rights market to continue buying the rights to meet its long-term obligations.

By rescinding alternative work schedules for people who have Monday's or Friday's off, you have done a great job of further hurting the morale of State employees. After years of pay cuts (in the form of more employee contribution to the retirement fund and furloughs), and years without a cost of living increase, the last thing you should be doing is hurting the morale of State Employees even more.

I know you won't care, but I for one, will be looking for a job in the private sector, where I had previously worked for 20 years, where I will be properly compensated for my skills and hard work.

New Mexico Press Association Annual Meeting

You will be introduced by Charles Fischer, publisher of the Roswell Daily Record and incoming president of NM Press Association.

Thank you, Charles.

It is good to see so many representatives of the press here today ... those who write the stories ... who edit them ... and those who publish them.

For centuries, the public has relied on the newspapers to deliver information that it would not otherwise be able to access.

And our founding fathers who recognized how critical ... and precious ... was the people's right to know ... they were so determined to preserve these freedoms that they safeguarded them in the Constitution.

As Thomas Jefferson noted, "Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost."

Here in New Mexico, the first printing press arrived in 1834 ... and in 1849, the first edition of the Santa Fe New Mexican was issued.

Since that time, New Mexico newspapers have told a story ... a story of community ... serving as a record of our shared history.

And as time moved on, a unique and interdependent relationship has developed between elected officials and the press.

In response, some politicians have consumed themselves with how they are portrayed in the media ... judging their success by the flattery of headlines, rather than the substance of their service.

Others have swung to the opposite side of the pendulum ... hiding from those they were elected to serve ... acting in secret ... avoiding transparency and accountability for their actions.

I believe that a balance between the two must be achieved if we—elected leaders and members of the press—are to carry out our responsibilities to the people of this state.

In the election of last November, New Mexicans voted for change.

I campaigned on issues that affect and matter to the great people of this state ... issues that reflect my own convictions and my values.

I made promises ... and I intend to keep those promises—regardless of how popular these decisions may appear in print.

Those of you in this room know first-hand just how destructive corruption in government can be. You know because you covered the stories. You saw the evidence. And many of you blew the whistle ... called a foul a foul. Rightfully so.

Corrupt habits don't occur overnight ... they are practiced ... refined over time ... a little dishonesty here ... going back on one's word there.

I promised New Mexicans they could trust me ... to do what is right ... to deal in the truth ... and to keep my word.

I am going to continue to fight to make good on the promises I have made to the people of this state.

They have asked me ... and I have promised ... to improve our state's regulatory process ... so that businesses are rewarded ... not penalized for operating in New Mexico. This is the first step in creating more good-paying jobs and putting more New Mexicans back to work.

And this change in attitude at the state level is gaining attention. Just recently we learned that TE Connectivity has chosen to consolidate its operations in southern New Mexico.

New Mexicans have also asked me, in overwhelming numbers, to reverse the dangerous policy of giving driver's licenses to illegal immigrants... this is a matter of public safety and I will not shirk this responsibility.

And on the education front ... I refuse to turn away from my promise to make sure our children are prepared to advance from the 3rd to the 4th grade ... intervening in the earliest grades to ensure they have the resources, instruction, and attention they need to succeed later in life.

I am also committed to making sure that our best teachers are recognized and compensated appropriately. And if the unions are reluctant to reward good teachers because they want to shield poor performance from scrutiny, then that is their choice ... but I refuse to hide excellence under the blanket of complacency.

It is time to raise the bar.

Another priority of my administration is to fight for those who cannot fight for themselves ... maybe that is the prosecutor in me.

I demonstrated my seriousness about this commitment in the beginning days of office when I put forward my Administration's executive budget recommendations.

I pledged to protect services to the most vulnerable among us, by limiting possible budget reductions from state agencies that provide needed service to the unemployed, low-income families, the developmentally disabled, and others dealing with financial and other challenges.

Special consideration was given to those agencies so as not to reduce those vital services.

And I was pleased that the State was able to replace 300 million dollars of one-time, federal stimulus dollars that was allocated to Medicaid. While the federal revenue source was drying up, I knew many New Mexicans had come to rely on these important services.

I was also proud we were able to restore the State's portion of funding to the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program—a program that funds food stamps for the elderly, disabled, and low-income families.

As you know, this funding wasn't included in the legislature's final budget, but in the special session, we were able to partner with lawmakers on both sides of the aisle to restore this critical funding.

And just yesterday, I announced that as a result of wise budgeting and responsible financial management, my administration was able to move 13 hundred children off the State's childcare waiting list.

Unfortunately, this list started when the past administration was forced to compensate for its excess spending habits. We are also able to restore to previous levels the State's reimbursement rates for childcare centers.

In the final year of the previous administration, 4 percent of the reimbursement rate had been cut. Many childcare providers are small businesses ... and a 4 percent cut can make the difference between maintaining services and closing your doors.

And just like those small businesses facing difficult budget choices, when I came into office, the State was staring down a 450-million-dollar deficit ... we too were forced to get our financial house in order ...

We were forced to prioritize ... forced to decide which programs we could fund ... without raising taxes and further burdening struggling New Mexico families.

I firmly believe that where we spend money is a reflection of our values ... and I believe that we can still balance our books without doing so on the backs of the poor.

And we did just that... Our finances are in order, our reserves are now above 9 percent, and our agencies exceeded expectations in the saving of taxpayer money.

We are on a new course, and I'm giving it my all to ensure that we put New Mexicans back to work, protect taxpayer dollars, and finally provide our children with the education they deserve.

Many of you I met on the campaign trail.

Others I have gotten to know during the last 10 months in office—and I look forward to working closely with you while I am privileged to serve New Mexico.

We have already seen how a mutually-respectful relationship can benefit New Mexicans.

Earlier this year, we partnered with the Association to bring state government closer to the people ... by providing links to your “public notices” website on the State’s new website, www.NewMexico.gov.

We also link these notices on the front of the Sunshine Portal. I want to commend Phil Lucy and Karen Moses for reaching out to us...we are thrilled to partner with you in this effort.

Why? Because I think it is important that we continue the practice of using print newspapers to display public notices

Another step my administration has taken to increase transparency is to webcast meetings live - and archive them - for the first time...

With some of the shady dealings that have come to light involving former appointees to the State Investment Council, I thought it was important to restore public trust by webcasting these meetings ... same goes with the Board of Finance and other key boards.

And it ruffled some feathers in the legislature, but we felt it was time to bring the process in Santa Fe to people throughout New Mexico, and we began webcasting legislative committee meetings and floor sessions.

I have also directed all executive departments and agencies to respond promptly, and thoroughly, to requests for information.

When it is possible to do so, I have asked that these requests be turned around as quickly as the data is collected—rather than running out the clock.

And when Jerome Block's indiscretions finally forced him to give up his seat on the Public Regulation Commission, I thought the public deserved to know who was applying to replace him.

From the day my office began accepting applications, they were made available to anyone who asked.

As you know, I have narrowed this list down to 5 candidates ... and I think you would agree this is a pretty talented field of finalists.

But there is still much to do if we are to bring real sunshine to the internal workings of state government.

One step we can take is to disclose the names, salaries, and positions of employees paid with taxpayer dollars.

State employees are valuable and integral to state operations. But, we must not let information about these positions be sheltered from the very individuals whose hard-earned dollars pay these salaries.

In addition to information already available on all exempt hires, going forward, I am proud to announce today that information for classified employees will also be made public on the state Sunshine Portal, including names, salaries, and positions.

This is a significant step, and we expect the data to be available by early December.

As I said earlier, our local newspapers tell OUR story. They record our history in a way that we can feel, touch, and hold.

And throughout history, you—the newspapermen and women of the world—have been a mainstay of this country... strengthening the roots of our democracy through the free flow of information to our citizens.

Even in the face of technological changes ... and in the electronic age ... I am confident that the print media will continue to play a vital role in educating New Mexicans.

We all play key roles in the unfolding of an era of great promise in New Mexico.

Thank you for inviting me to join you at this year's New Mexico Press Association's annual convention.

I look forward to working with you all in the upcoming years to come.

Subject: Fact Sheet Regarding Proposed EO on Procurement Reform

Hi Erin,

Attached, please find a Fact Sheet/Background paper that explains why the Governor is issuing an Executive Order that compels state agencies to add new clauses to solicitations and contracts.

We are happy to answer any questions and make any recommended changes.

Thanks,
Ed

Fact Sheet for Executive Order Concerning Transparency in State Contracts

- The Governor's Procurement Reform Task Force has unanimously recommended changes to the contract solicitation and award process that will help prevent contracting lapses that occurred at NMCD from occurring at other state agencies. In addition, NM wants to be proactive in including contract terms and conditions in its contracts that promote doing business with only reputable and responsible firms. We want to put contractors on notice that the state will not tolerate unscrupulous or corrupt contractors whose actions cast doubt on their responsibility in using taxpayer funds. By adding new clauses to solicitations and contracts, the state is serving notice that it will suspend and/or debar contractors who violate the states' trust. These changes will ensure the contractor community performing services for the state do so in a reputable and transparent manner. Benefits are:
- Majority of the State Auditor's NMCD audit findings will be mitigated through implementation of the following changes.
 1. The State must approve vendor's use of subcontractors prior to work being commenced on all Price Agreements and contracts. This is language that appears in most state contracts but did not appear in all of the Price Agreements/Contracts reviewed by the OAS at NMCD.
 2. Audit of vendor and lower tier sub-contractors. This language did not appear in most of the Price Agreements and Contracts.
 3. Approval by the State of changes to key vendor personnel. Transparency into changes of vendor personnel will ensure the state receives the level of expertise as originally bid or proposed. This language did not appear in most Price Agreements and/or Contracts.
 4. Flow-down requirement of the above provisions to Subcontractors. This is new language for most state contracts and Price Agreements.

Further enhancements of the foregoing are as follows:

1. Disclosure Regarding Responsibility requires vendors and potential vendors to disclose whether it or its principals have been debarred or suspended, convicted or had a civil judgment rendered against it, are delinquent in payment of federal or state taxes, have had any contracts terminated for default, or are currently charged for fraud or a criminal offense associated with a procurement related event. This reporting requirement is on-going for the term of its contract. This is a self-reporting requirement placed on all vendors.

2. Vendors will be required to disclose responsibility issues associated with all its subcontractors for use on state solicitations and contracts. This is a flow down requirement to find out this information on subcontractors.

Transparency and auditability provide important tools to the state in protecting the public trust in solicitation, award, and ongoing performance of state business

FAQ's

1) Why is this issued as an Executive Order?

This is a very important step in ensuring the spending of state monies are to reputable and legitimate contractors. This Administration is dedicated to transparency and receiving the highest value possible for each dollar spent. These changes could be implemented via regulatory change; however, the governor wishes to put an exclamation point on the importance of implementing these changes for all state agencies.

2) Why do these requirements flow to lower-tier subcontractors?

Fraud, waste, and abuse can occur at any level of contracted work and will not be tolerated.
